

Step 4. Choose the environmental protection level:

A “low” environmental protection level indicates that potential hydro power stations can be setup in all catchments that do not already contain any existing hydro power stations.

A “high” environmental protection level indicates that potential hydro power stations can be setup in any catchments that do not already contains any existing hydro power stations and on any type of protected are (e.g., national park, nature reserve).